

The National Society of Allotment and Leisure Gardeners

...promotion, protection and preservation of allotment gardening.

NSALG's roots

NSALG has its roots as far back as 1901, when the Agricultural Organisation Society was established with the aim of co-operation amongst agriculturists and the organisation of small holdings and allotments.

Today, it maintains the British heritage by providing a united voice and action to protect and preserve a traditional way of life. With today's emphasis on protection of the environment,

The objectives of the Society is to help all enjoy the recreation of gardening and so promote their health, education and community fellowship. To achieve these objectives, the Society:

- Encourages the formation of gardening associations.
- Seeks to safeguard their interest through improved legislation.
- Advises and assists generally on all problems that face the amateur gardener.

increased leisure facilities, attention to a healthy way of life and the recognition of organic growing, the Society has an organisational structure spreading the length and breadth of the country.

The Society aims to ensure that facilities are made available to all who desire to follow the recreation of gardening and endeavours to instil a better understanding of the fact that gardening is a recreation for the mind and body as well as a source of economic wealth both to the individual and to the nation.

The Society is registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act and is strictly non-political, non-sectarian and non-racial.
